

EKSO Stock Halts & Breakouts

By winkler · June 25, 2020

TL;DR

Today's market saw a slow open that led to significant late morning rallies, particularly for stocks like $IZEA, $PHCF, $KTOV, and $EKSO. This post discusses the halts and breakouts observed in these stocks.

Slow open sometimes means wicked late morning rallies and that's what happened today.

IZEA\$3.60+0.84% PHCF— KTOV— EKSO\$11.80+1.29%

<https://youtu.be/Ao2RwUWlRy4>

FAQ

What caused the late morning rallies?

The late morning rallies were likely a result of a slow open, which often sets the stage for increased trading activity later in the day.

Which stocks experienced notable movements?

Stocks that experienced notable movements include $IZEA, $PHCF, $KTOV, and $EKSO.

What does a 'slow open' mean?

A 'slow open' refers to a market opening where trading activity is subdued, often leading to increased volatility as traders react to market conditions.

Where can I find more information on these stocks?

More information can be found in the linked video, which provides insights into the market movements of these stocks.

What are stock breakouts?

Stock breakouts occur when a stock price moves above a defined resistance level, often leading to increased trading volume and potential price increases.