Cargo Ship Is Partially Freed, Raising Hopes of Restoring Trade Traffic

- The Ever Given, the giant cargo ship blocking the Suez Canal, was partially refloated early Monday, five days after it ran aground.
- While officials cautioned that the operation was still underway, they expressed increasing confidence that the ship would soon be completely free.
- “We shouldn’t start cheering just yet,” said the chief executive of Royal Boskalis Westminster, which is helping to move the vessel. Here’s the latest on the ship.
